A. Facet Objective(s) that this activity satisfied (Not to exceed 3):

1. To promote the Links brand and honor The Links' International Trends and Services Night of 1,000 Dinners initiative to celebrate International Women's Day by dining with women of a different nationality.

B. Description of activity. If this was a combined effort between facets, please state how each participating facet was involved:

The daughter in-law of a Tacoma (WA) Link meets with a group of African women on a monthly basis. Tacoma (WA) Chapter arranged to meet with the group in recognition of International Women's Day. The group had an agenda consisting of praise and worship, a speaker, and group discussion and sharing on the topic - Friendship. Our chapter president presented an overview of the history and programs of The Links, specifically our local chapter. Participants enjoyed African desserts with beverages, donated by Tacoma (WA) Chapter, at the end of the session.

D. Methods used to determine the target group(s):

The International ITS committee recommended participation in this type of activity. We gained access to this group through the African daughter in-law of one of our chapter members.

Most outstanding qualities of this activity (up to three)

1. Collaboration with African group
2. Exposure for The Links, Incorporated
3. Invitation to repeat/continue

How will this activity be sustained?

We can do this annually and/or expand it.

Method of communicating and publicizing the activity

A flyer was given to each chapter member. Follow-up e-mails were sent prior to the event.

Methods and results of activity evaluation

(Briefly describe how each goal/objective was met and list the outcomes).

The objective was to support the international initiative. Evaluation method is anecdotal. Participants were actively engaged and asked questions about The Links and the scholarship program. They requested additional visits. Some probably will visit our website.
